A capitalist of Washington, D. C., wishes to purchase fifty themsand serves of pine land so great the line of the Wilmington and Weldon.

It is complained that the remains of dead marses are gushered and buried as soldiers in the national constery in East Tennaesee by the government agent employed to gather and bury the fact of a velocipede, probably using whip and spur upon his ligenous charger to free yellowing the failure of a velocipede, probably using whip and spur upon his ligenous charger to free and spur upon his ligenous charger to free failure of a velocipede, probably using whip and spur upon his ligenous charger to free failure of a velocipede, probably using whip and spur upon his ligenous charger to free failure of a velocipede, probably using whip and spur upon his ligenous charger to free vertainly do not see that bills for additional Pacific all the failure of considerably damaged. Not having properly broken his high-metical charges are gushered and buried as soldiers in the national considerably damaged. The first dark state is kept in beyance to annoy Johnson and flatter Grant. We think, therefore,

Mrs. Swisshelm, Miss Ream, &c. The well-known Mrs. Swisshelm, in a public letter denying, or seeming to deny, that the managers of the inauguration ceremoshe has abused Miss Vinnie Ream, the nies at Washington, that there should be sculptor, abuses her most shamefully. We no inauguration ball, has come out. The do not see that the dell ady takes much by her hand, when, at the very moment of practicing abuse, she denies that she has been practicing it. The provocation to her abuse appears to be an anonymous letter to the St. Louis Democrat, a letter for which it is not even asblack public sentiment in the other. So crat, a letter for which it is not even as-sumed that Miss Ream is in any way re-sponsible. The letter purports to give a private conversation of Miss Ream, but, like writer to the Democrat to have said that she has received kinder and more generous treatment from men than from women.

Mrs. Swisshelm, whose name has become the synonym of common scold, says that Miss Ream, by this remark, which it is most likely she never made, has "openly placed herself beyond the pale of woman's sym-pathy." We do not see how she has done this. If the young sculptor, struggling in an honorable field for success, has been less sustained and encouraged by her own than by the other sex, she does no wrong in stating the truth when she has occasion to state it. She does not torfeit woman's sympathy by saying that it has not been properly given to her. Mrs. S. says:

I never wrote anything about Miss Ream, but one paragraph in a letter describing her the only time I saw her, i. e., is the Senate gallery, purting her see in thousand tollar bill through that the say her, i. e., is the Senate gallery, purting her see in thousand tollar bill through that of a public pensioner she may not plead privacy to shield her designs and character from the scrutiny of the public whose money she pockets; and, for her sake, I regret that the facts I thus stated have never been contradicted, and that my predicted that it is writed her wetling. to state it. She does not torfeit woman's

So it is evident the old woman did abuse the young one, the old writer the young sculptor, but her plea is that she did it only once. Being capable of doing it once, she would be equally capable of doing it fifty times if she could hope thereby to subserve a purpose. What does she urge as her provocation? Why, she saw Miss Ream in the gallery of the Senate during the pendency of a bill to appropriate ten thousand dollars to pay her for a statue of Mr. Linimproper place for Miss Ream? If Mrs. S. herself kadn't been there, she wouldn't have seen Miss R. there. Did Miss Rean electioneer for her bill? If so, 'twas no

Mrs. Swisshelm spoke of Miss R.'s having "Placed herself in the position of a public pensioner." How a public pensioner! Is every person a "public pensioner!" whom Congress engages to do stipulated work at a stipulated price! Are all the great artists and other classes of men that Government has employed for various purposes "mublic has employed for various purposes "public pensioners?" Is Miss Ream any more a pensioner upon the Government that pays her for her statuary than Mrs. Swisshelm is upon the publishers that pay her for her letters? When a woman seeks a job like thousands that have been given and are continually given to men, why should oth-er women pursue her like a pack of wolves,

We have not seen the paragraph that Mrs. Swisshelm speaks of having written about Miss Ream some time ago, but Mrs. 8. says in reference to 15, tant, whose woman seeks to be "a public pensioner," that is, seeks employment from Congress, "she may not plead privacy to shield her character," do. The botol, besides being a credit to our city in general, will benefit more particularly all property holders in the vicinity, and we respectfully tender the suggestion that all those owning property in the neighborhood (the value of which is alrayely enhanced by proximity to the hotel) should step forward and subscribe liberally to this loan. This applies with peculia froce to our pork-packers and provision dealers, whose business and property is especially benefited by the location of the hotel in their vicinity. It is not much to sak of a class so opened.

SCENES AT THE GALLOWS TREE As Described by an Eye-Witnes

A short time since, a negro went to the house of a highly respeciable farmer living some six miles out from Owensbore, about mid-day, and saked for food, saying he was hungry. There were no persons about except the wife and child-ron of the farmer, the former being engaged in cooking dinner for the farm hands. Food was given the negro, and after he had finished eating, he asked where "the men folks" were. The woman reptiled that her husband was away from home, and that the farm hands were in the field at work. On receiving this piece of information, the negro at once arose, and, going to the door, closed and boiled it, then attacking the helpiess woman, he overpowered and violated her in the presence of her children, despite her crite for mercy. After the black brute had committed the arime, he seed and got well out of the way before it was

On the day following the negro was pursued, captured and carried to Owensboro, where, after a preliminary examination before Judge Triplitt, he was committed to juil to await trial in the Circuit Court. Judge Washburue, of Owensboro,

The name of the hagro is not known. He was spillow in color, and was something of a dandy in dees. It is assetted that he was from Seferson country, and had but recently set to be negro who has lyndred only the same blooks tree some time since. The lyschers were said to be parties from the since. The lyschers were said to be parties from the neighborhood in which the outlage was committed. They wore no disguises except long beards and quisakees.

CITY FEATURES.

An Independent Life.
The great cities of the country are crowded with thousands of persons seeking employment, whereby they may earn a living. The supply is prester than the demand, and hundreds wander grester han the demand, and hundreds wander hopelessly about the street in search of something to do. The broad fertile fields of the country offer a the reward for the toil of the laborer. By the scheme known as the Henderson Land Sale, a magnificent opportunity is offered to secure a valitable farm and a sure means of an independent living at a trifling cost. The lands are now rented for $12 per acre, the proceeds to be paid to the holders of lucky certificates. See advertisement.
